Alexandria Gazette

FRIDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 22,

JUPITER'S MOONS .- A correspondent, who has investigated the matter, clearly disproves the plans for seeing the moons of Jupiter by looking at its reflection in a mirror. A great amount of light is lost by reflection, and from this fact already, it would be evident that there would be no possibility of seeing in a plain mir ror the reflection invisible to the naked eye. Any one may easily be convinced that what is supposed to be moons are only reflections of Jupiter, if he will make the following experi ments: Take mirrors, the glass of which varies in thickness-the thicker the glass the more distant and the further from the planet the "moons" will speear, while a polished metal surface will show no moons whatever. Revolve the mirror and the moons revolve too. Take acy bright star-Venus for (x mple-and the same moons will appear. Even when the moons of Jupiter are visible on one side of the planet only, the images in the mirror will appear on both sides of the reflection of the planet. What are imagined to be moone are refl cions of the same star. Part of the light is refl cted from the upper surface of the glass, other portions are refracted, then r. 1 cored from the lower or silvered surface of the mirror, and finally refracted a second time. These doubly refracted rays give the images which are regarded as moons. The thicker the glass the greater the amount of refraction, and hence these images are more dis just if a mirror with thick glass be used. In consequence of the double refl clops, from the upper to the lower surface of all glass mirrors, the speculum of every reflecting telescope is made of metal. Opening and Closing of the Mails.
